

Project Wheels-to-Work

Reliable Transportation.
Meaningful Employment.
Lasting Recovery.

Finding Harmony Recovery operates a Workforce-First model focused on accountability and employment. We currently serve 40 residents, including U.S. Veterans, who are rebuilding their lives through stable work and structured housing.

Why Work Matters in Recovery

- Restores dignity and purpose: Employment helps individuals rediscover their value and rebuild confidence.
- Creates structure: Consistent schedules reduce risk factors and reinforce healthy routines.
- Builds financial independence: Earned income allows residents to support themselves and plan for the future.
- Strengthens accountability: Showing up each day promotes responsibility and personal growth.
- Encourages long-term stability: Work is one of the strongest predictors of sustained recovery.

The Barrier: Transportation

For many men in recovery, the greatest obstacle is not willingness to work—it is getting there. Without reliable transportation, job opportunities are limited, employment can be lost, and progress toward independence is jeopardized.

Our Solution: Project Wheels-to-Work

Project Wheels-to-Work expands our transportation capacity to ensure every resident has a guaranteed seat to work each day. By removing transportation barriers, we strengthen job retention, increase income stability, and support long-term independence.
